Choosing where to live in retirement is a big, life-changing decision. Downsizing is a time of great change, and where you live can have a big impact on your quality of life.

Retirement villages can be a great option for many New Zealanders, but it's important to do your research and understand your options before making a decision.

Retirement villages in New Zealand vary widely in size, amenities, location, and price. Some villages are large, with many homes and a wide range of facilities, such as swimming pools, gyms, libraries, and restaurants. Others are smaller and offer a more intimate feel.

Pricing also varies widely depending on the home you choose to occupy, the suburb where the village is located, and the amenities it offers.

This guide will provide you with a comprehensive understanding of how retirement villages work in New Zealand, as well as guide you through the key questions you should be asking village and sales staff when visiting.

Moving to a retirement village can be a big change, but it can also be a fantastic way to enjoy your retirement years.

Best, Paula.

Benefits of retirement village living

From community spirit to healthcare, here are some of the top perks of living in a retirement village in New Zealand.

Low-maintenance accommodation

Homes in retirement villages are purpose-built for retirees, which means they are almost always low maintenance.

Whether you choose to live in a villa, townhouse or apartment, you'll be able to down your DIY tools and spend more time doing what you enjoy.

Community spirit

Most retirement villages have a warm and welcoming community. You will likely live alongside like-minded neighbours and make new friends. Many villages coordinate voluntary social activities to encourage neighbourly bonds, such as group outings, quiz nights, and hobby groups.

Healthcare

Around 65% of retirement villages have an on-site care home. You may be able to request medical assistance from care home staff if needed.

Common staff and contracted health practitioners include registered nurses, physiotherapists, and podiatrists. Healthcare services at villages vary widely, so it's important to research this carefully.

Security

Most retirement villages have good on-site security, such as monitored cameras or on-site security guards. The level of security differs from village to village, so it's important to ask the sales manager for details.

Facilities

Nearly all retirement villages have a communal TV and communal dining area at a minimum, while others have swimming pools, gyms, and hair salons. Facilities vary from village to village, so it's important to 'shop around' to find a village that ticks all the right boxes for your lifestyle.

Emergency push-buttons

Most retirement villages have emergency call buttons in every home and common area or provide pendants for residents to wear. These push buttons/pendants are usually monitored 24/7 by trained responders, providing peace of mind that help is always close by.

Please note: All retirement villages are different. Most villages have the above features in common, but it's important to visit villages in-person to find out more about their unique benefits.

Is retirement village living right for you?

Retirement villages are not for everyone. There are financial, legal and individual circumstances to consider.

From our experience, people who are most suited to retirement village living tend to have many of the following characteristics in common.

Property ownership

The ability to sell a property (usually your own home) to release equity to buy into a village.

Desire for companionship

A desire to live in a friendly, welcoming community with like-minded people, either with your spouse/partner or on your own.

Planning for the future

A wish to create a clear plan for your future (especially in terms of healthcare and support services).

Lifestyle preferences

The desire to enjoy a low-maintenance, social, active lifestyle with access to on-site facilities.

Security and peace of mind

A desire to live somewhere with on-site security, as well as pre-installed emergency push-buttons and on-site support.

Keep living the life you love.

Understanding the different living options in retirement villages

Many retirement villages offer three different living options: independent living, assisted living, and accommodation within care homes.

Following is an overview of each living option to help you understand the difference and make an informed decision.

Independent living

As the term suggests, 'independent living' refers to any type of home within a retirement village where you can live completely independently.

Residents in independent living accommodation may request certain in-home support services if they wish, but these are optional extras, not part of the accommodation package.

Find out more about independent living and view homes for sale on the Village Guide website →

Benefits of independent living:

- Retain complete independence and privacy.
- Live life your way, opting for as much or as little socialisation as you wish.
- Choose from a variety of home sizes and layouts, including villas, townhouses, and apartments.
- Enjoy close proximity to on-site facilities.
- Homes are specifically designed for people in retirement — they are low-maintenance and commonly fitted with emergency call buttons.

Assisted living

The term 'assisted living' refers to accommodation that includes in-home support for those who need help with activities such as meal preparation, housekeeping, and personal care.

Assisted living is a bridge between independent living and care home accommodation. Most assisted living homes are apartments, but some villages offer assisted living within other types of accommodation, such as villas or townhouses.

Find out more about assisted living and view homes for sale on the Village Guide website →

Benefits of assisted living:

- Receive support with day-to-day activities such as meal preparation, housekeeping, and personal care.
- Enjoy close proximity to village facilities (most assisted living homes are located centrally within a village).
- Stay living as independently as possible, including with a partner, while receiving support tailored to your individual needs.
- Your home is your own — keep your own furniture, add your favourite personal touches, and enjoy privacy when you need it.

Care homes

Care homes provide accommodation and care for individuals who have been assessed as unable to live independently and require assistance with daily activities and specific health or personal care needs.

Commonly known as rest homes, care is provided at four different levels – rest home, hospital, dementia and psychogeriatric. Most people (84 per cent) receive either rest home or hospital care.

Those who qualify for rest home care have fewer complex needs and don't require such intensive support. Those in hospital, dementia or psychogeriatric care have more complex needs and require a higher level of support.

Regulated by the Ministry of Health, care homes in New Zealand must adhere to specific standards and guidelines to ensure the provision of high-quality care. These facilities have trained staff members, including healthcare professionals such as registered nurses, caregivers, and support workers, who cater to the individual needs of residents.

The costs of living in a retirement village

An overview to retirement village entry costs, exit costs, weekly fees, and other financial implications.

There are important costs to consider when buying into a retirement village. Every village will have a unique fee structure, but here are some of the most common fees to keep in mind.

Entry costs

To buy into a village, you're typically required to pay a deposit and a capital sum for an occupation right agreement (ORA). The most common legal title under an ORA is a licence to occupy, which gives you a contractual right to live in a specific home within a village, but no legal ownership of the home itself or the land.

Find out more about retirement village fees on the Village Guide website →

Deferred management fee

Under a licence to occupy, it's common for the operator to retain between 20–30% of your initial capital sum; this is usually referred to as a deferred management fee.

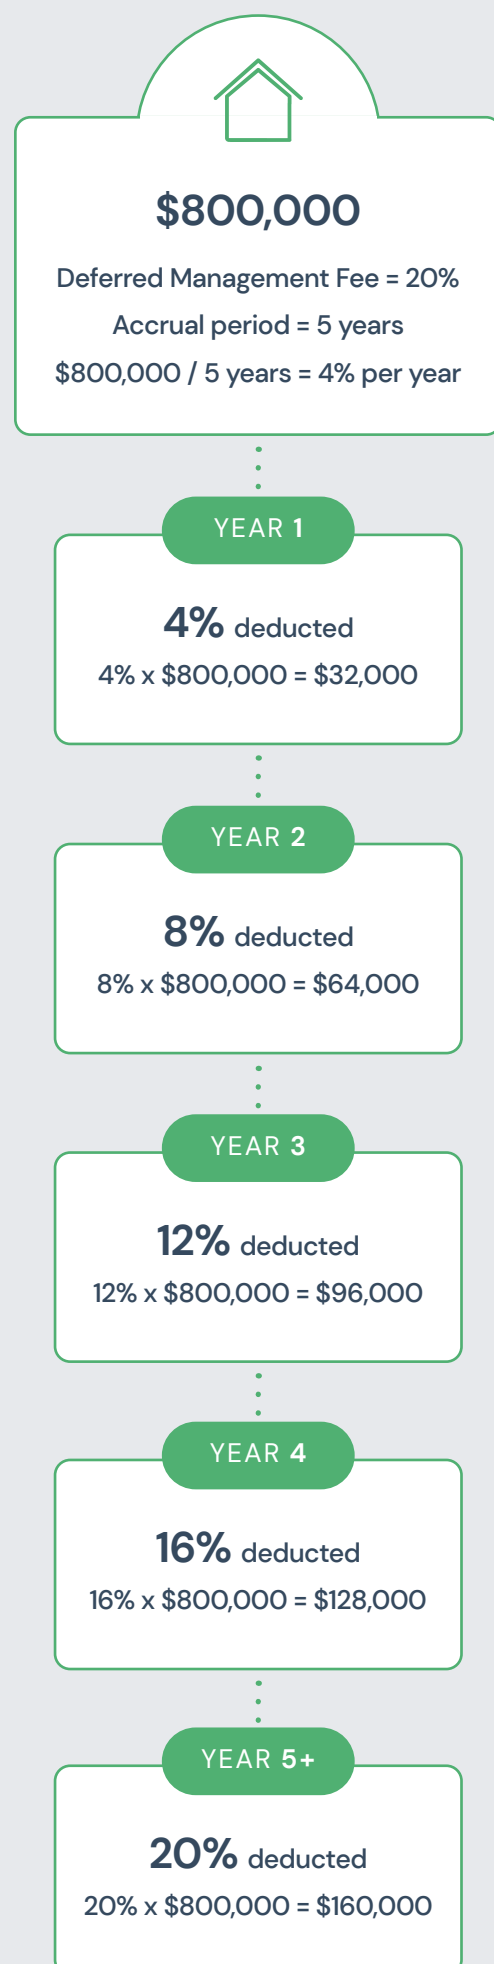

A good way to think of the deferred management fee is that it covers the long-term costs of residing at the village, such as maintenance of facilities and communal areas, and the re-licencing and refurbishment of your property after the licence ends.

The deferred management fee typically accrues between the first 2–5 years of residing at the village and is deducted on the re-sale of your licence. The fee is calculated as a percentage (typically between 20–30%) of the initial capital sum and it accrues to the operator over a period of time (usually 2–5 years).

Example

If you paid an initial capital sum of $800,000 for a licence to occupy and the operator of the village had a deferred management fee of 20% accruing at 4% for each year over five years, then:

- After year one: your deferred management fee would be $32,000. On repayment from the operator, $32,000 would be deducted from the initial capital sum you paid for the unit.
- After year two: 8% of the deferred management fee will have accrued (8% of $800,000 is $64,000).
- After year three: 12% of the deferred management fee will have accrued (12% of $800,000 is $96,000).
- After year four: 16% of the deferred management fee will have accrued (16% of $800,000 is $128,000).
- After year five: 20% of the deferred management fee will have accrued (20% of $800,000 is $160,000).
- After year ten: in this scenario, the maximum deferred management fee was 20%. Therefore after five years, you would have reached the maximum deferred management fee, so regardless of whether you left the village after five, 10 or 15 years the deferred management fee wouldn't exceed $160,000.

What the fee covers varies between villages, so it's important to discuss the details of the fee and how it's calculated with the sales manager.

Note: Some operators will include costs associated with re-licencing your unit – such as legal, admin and marketing fees – within the deferred management fee. Other villages will have them as separate costs. It's important to consider this when comparing the deferred management fee percentage between villages.

Depending on the village, the deferred management fee may be known by another term such as:

- Membership fee
- Amenities fee
- Facilities fee
- Village contribution fee

Weekly or periodic fees

While you're living in a village, you'll be required to pay periodic (usually weekly) fees to cover day-to-day operating costs such as rates, insurance, grounds maintenance, staff wages and village services. The fee amount (and what's included) varies from village to village, so be sure to ask the sales manager for details.

Fees may increase over time (with appropriate notice from the village), or they may remain the same during your entire occupancy (these are generally marketed as fixed fees).

What's included and excluded from village fees?

Every village is different. However, in most cases, you will be required to pay separately for things like contents insurance, phone & internet, household power, and any additional services you choose, such as housekeeping, meals or healthcare.

Some of these costs may be covered in the periodic fee if you live in a serviced apartment. Be sure to ask the village sales manager for a full breakdown of inclusions and exclusions based on your living arrangement i.e. independent living versus assisted living.

Leaving costs

Exit costs often depend on the circumstances in which you leave the village. For example, whether you leave the village altogether or transfer to a different home within the village (e.g. from a villa to a serviced apartment).

Some potential leaving costs to be aware of include:

- The deferred management fee.

If you leave the village, the deferred management fee will be deducted from the capital sum you receive when the operator re-licenses your unit. If you transfer to another home in the village, it's important to ask the sales manager how your deferred management fee will be treated.

- Ongoing weekly or periodic fees.

Your occupation right agreement will set out whether weekly fees cease when you provide vacant possession or continue until your unit is re-licensed. If the fees continue, the operator must reduce them by at least 50% by either:

- The date you stop living in the unit (and remove all your possessions) or
- Six months after the date your licence to occupy terminates.

Important financial questions to ask the sales manager

Here are some helpful questions to ask to gain clarity around fees and costs:

- What is the initial capital sum, which is often referred to as an entry payment, and what does it cover?
- What percentage of the initial capital sum is the deferred management fee, over how many years does it accrue, and what does it cover?
- How much are the periodic fees, how are they calculated, and what do they include/exclude?
- What is the village's policy around increasing or changing periodic fees?
- Will I be required to pay periodic fees if I'm in hospital or on holiday?
- What costs will I need to pay for myself? For example, power, phone, internet, contents insurance?
- What are the costs of transferring to a new home within the village? For example, will my weekly fee change and how will the accrual of my deferred management fee be treated?
- Will I be entitled to capital gains or a share of capital gains?
- Will I be liable for capital loss?
- Are there any additional costs I need to be aware of when I leave? For example, marketing, admin or legal fees?

Understanding retirement village contracts and paperwork

When you apply to live in a retirement village, you will be given a large stack of papers. What do all the forms mean and where should you start?

Here is a brief introduction to retirement village contracts and paperwork to help you better understand the application process.

A retirement village has to provide prospective residents with four main documents before they sign up:

1

Disclosure statement

2

Occupation right agreement

3

The Code of Residents' Rights

4

Retirement Villages Code of Practice

Please note: Although we have sought the advice of retirement lawyers, we are not retirement law experts. This information is intended as a guide and all content is for informational purposes only. If you require specific assistance, please consult your lawyer.

The disclosure statement

It's a good idea to start with the disclosure statement, as this is the working document that explains how the village runs from day to day and what you can expect when living there.

In the disclosure statement, you'll find information about:

- The village's ownership and management structure.
- Statutory supervision arrangements.
- Charges/fees associated with living in the village.
- An estimate of what you would receive if you left the village after two, five or ten years.
- The village's community facilities and services, including what provision is made for maintenance at the village.

The disclosure statement should also outline any plans for the development of the village including the building of new homes (and the effect of this on existing residents), as well as any conditions and restrictions on the sale of homes, and the time it has taken to sell vacant homes over the past 12 months.

Understanding what's on the horizon for a retirement village is important. For example, if new homes are built, and these new homes are for sale when you move out of the village, this could impact how long it takes to sell your older re-furbished home. Essentially, your older home will be competing with the brand new homes.

Disclosure statements vary from village to village, so it's a good idea to get a lawyer to look over it to make sure everything appears to be in order.

The occupation right agreement

The occupation right agreement is the 'terms and conditions' agreement between a resident and a retirement village operator.

Under the Retirement Villages Act 2003, every intending resident must receive independent legal advice before signing an occupation right agreement.

The agreement sets out the terms and conditions on which you will be entitled to occupy and live in a home at the village. It includes provisions relating to termination, weekly (and other) charges, whether the charges can be increased, village rules, and even whether you can have a pet.

As with the disclosure statement, the terms outlined in the occupation right agreement can differ from village to village. Your lawyer should talk you through the paperwork, isolate anything that appears unreasonable or unusual, and ensure you fully understand the agreement.

Code of Residents' Rights

The Code of Residents' Rights set out the general terms of respect and care that the Retirement Villages Act provides for all residents.

Here are some examples of the rights:

- The right to services and other benefits as detailed in the occupation right agreement.
- The right to information about matters that could affect your residency.
- The right to be consulted about potential changes to services, benefits and charges.
- The right to complain and receive a timely response.
- The right to a speedy and efficient process for resolving disputes, and to use a support person when dealing with the operator or other residents of the village.
- The right to be treated with courtesy and not to be exploited.

4

Retirement Villages Code of Practice

The Retirement Villages Code of Practice sets out the minimum requirements that operators of a retirement village must carry out to meet their legal obligations in New Zealand.

It covers areas such as:

- Staff qualifications and training.
- Safety and security.
- Fire and emergency procedures.
- Frequency of residents' meetings and residents' participation in decision making.
- How the complaints process is conducted.
- What should happen upon termination of an ORA.

Find out more about retirement village contracts and paperwork on the Village Guide website →

Insurance requirements for retirement village operators

According to the Code of Practice, a village operator must maintain a comprehensive insurance policy to cover loss or damage caused by fire, accident or natural disaster.

The insurance policy must cover:

- Retirement village property.
- Capital improvements or additional fittings provided by residents.
- Residential units owned by residents.

Insurance must be for full replacement (if available). If full replacement insurance isn't available, indemnity insurance is permitted, and the operator must clearly communicate what cover is provided.

Additional insurances

An operator may choose to take out additional insurance policies, for example public liability or insurance to cover business interruption. All of a village operator's insurance policies should be listed in the village's disclosure statement.

Operators must also:

- Inform residents whether they pass on any policy excess amounts and if so, in what circumstances.
- Keep the insurance valuation of all property types up-to-date as often as is required by the insurance policy.
- Provide residents with a copy of the insurance certificate of currency on request.

Operators are NOT responsible for contents insurance or vehicle insurance

Residents are responsible for contents insurance should they wish to insure personal contents within their unit, as well as their own vehicle insurance. Both contents insurance and vehicle insurance are optional and residents may take out policies with any provider.

What happens if there's a fire or natural disaster?

If the home you occupy within a retirement village is damaged through no fault of your own, such as in a fire or natural disaster, the operator must consult with you to determine whether it is practicable to repair or replace the home.

Most likely outcomes following a fire or natural disaster

After a fire or natural disaster where you are not at fault, the operator must consult with you as to whether it is practicable to repair or replace the unit. There are a number of outcomes that could be considered, such as:

- Repairing or replacing the unit.
- Transferring to another unit within the same village.
- Transferring to another unit in a sister village (owned by the same operator, if applicable).
- Terminating the occupation right agreement and leaving the village.

Repairing or replacing the unit

If the operator decides to repair or replace the unit, repairs or construction should commence as soon as practicable.

Transfers

If repairing or replacing the unit is not a viable option, you may have the option to transfer to another unit within the same village or a sister village nearby.

Terminating the occupation right agreement

There are two scenarios for terminating the occupation right agreement.

1. If a transfer is available but you do not accept it, then the occupation right agreement is deemed to have been terminated by you. The original terms outlined in the occupation right agreement will apply, including any fixed deduction.
2. If a transfer is not available, your exit payment must be at least equal to the capital sum you paid for the home less any charges you owe to the operator e.g. any outstanding weekly fee payments. However the accrual of your fixed deduction (deferred management fee) will not be deducted.

Your occupation right agreement might provide for a higher repayment, in which case repayment must be in accordance with your occupation right agreement.

Charges after a fire or natural disaster

If a fire, natural disaster or other event which was not your fault means that your home is uninhabitable then the fixed deduction must stop accruing or amortising from the date of that event. The regular fees that you pay for village outgoings or personal services must also stop on that date. If the operator provides you with temporary accommodation then accrual of the fixed deduction can be restarted and you will be responsible for the cost of any outgoings or personal services related to that temporary accommodation.

If the operator is not providing you with temporary accommodation then the charges under your occupation right agreement will only resume when your home is ready for occupation by you.

Fire protection and emergency management

The Retirement Villages Code of Practice 2008 includes clear rules for operators in regards to fire protection and emergency management (clauses 19 to 23).

For example, all villages must have adequate insurance, a fire protection and emergency management policy (in writing), and evacuation and emergency response procedures.

You can ask the village operator for a copy of the fire protection and emergency management policy. The operator must provide an easily readable version to both current and intending residents on request.

Find out more about what happens in the event of a fire or natural disaster on the Village Guide website →

What happens when you leave a village?

When a resident leaves a village, it's usually (but not always) the operator's responsibility to sell the licence to occupy for the vacant home. So, how does the sales process work?

Some common questions people have about the sales process include:

- When will the former resident(s) receive their exit payment?
- Will you continue paying fees until the licence is sold?
- Do you have any control over how quickly the village operator sells the licence?

Every village has a slightly different sales process, which should be clearly outlined in the Occupation Right Agreement that a resident signs when they buy into a village. However, at a minimum, all villages must adhere to the guidelines for selling vacant units outlined in the Retirement Villages Code of Practice 2008 (clause 51).

Who is responsible for selling the home?

When a resident leaves a village, it's usually (but not always) the operator's responsibility to sell the licence to occupy

for the vacant home. Every village has a slightly different sales process, which should be clearly outlined in the occupation right agreement (it's important to read this carefully).

Exit payment

Once the licence to occupy is sold, the operator must pay the former resident all money owing to them under their occupation right agreement within five working days of receiving payment in full from the new resident.

Please note, this is subject to the new resident's cooling off period having expired. Also, if the former resident has died, probate will be required before payment can be made. Note that some operators agree to pay out earlier or pay interest after a certain period.

What happens if you leave and the unit doesn't sell right away?

Every village will follow a slightly different process for selling vacant homes. However, at a minimum, all villages must adhere to the guidelines for selling vacant homes outlined in the Retirement Villages Code of Practice 2008. Below is a summary of what happens after three, six and nine months if your home hasn't sold.

After three months

If a new occupation right agreement has not been entered into within three months, the operator must report in writing to the former resident, and provide detailed monthly updates from then on. The monthly reports must clearly outline the steps the operator is taking to market the unit.

After six months

If the unit is still vacant after six months, the operator must get an independent valuation of the unit (at their expense) to make sure the asking price is a suitable price. The former resident may also obtain an independent valuation (at their own cost) if they feel the first valuation is inaccurate and the operator must consider this when determining a suitable price.

After nine months

If an occupation right has not been sold for the unit after nine months, the former resident may choose to take a dispute notice to the Retirement Villages Disputes Panel, if grounds for a dispute have arisen.

3 MONTHS

Report in writing to the former resident.
Detailed monthly reports thereafter.

6 MONTHS

The operator must get an independent valuation of the unit.

9 MONTHS

Former resident may take a dispute notice to the Retirement Villages Disputes Panel.

Former residents may make a complaint about the sales process at any time.

Periodic or weekly fees

The resident's occupation right agreement will set out whether weekly fees cease when the resident provides vacant possession or if they continue through until the residential unit is sold.

If the latter applies, then the operator of the village must reduce any outgoing fees by at least 50% by the latter of either the date the resident stops living in the unit (and removes all their possessions) or six months after the date that the former resident's occupation licence terminates.

All fees for personal services must cease as soon as a resident stops living permanently in the unit.

Transitioning to higher level care: What you need to know

It's important to consider long-term care options when exploring retirement villages, particularly if continuum of care within the same location is important to you.

Many retirement villages offer continuum of care within an on-site care home. This means that residents may be able to transition into higher levels of care should the need arise in the future.

Types of care

In New Zealand, care is offered across four levels: rest home, hospital, dementia, and psychogeriatric.

An on-site care home may provide one or more of these levels of care. Typically, a care home offers rest home and potentially hospital level care. However, specialised units and nursing care are necessary for secure dementia and psychogeriatric care, which not all care homes have the facilities or staff to provide. As a result, residents in need of this higher level of care may need to transition outside of the village.

Care accommodation

Care accommodation is typically offered in a room located within a care home. Rooms vary in size and amenities depending on the specific care home and whether you occupy a standard or premium room. Some retirement villages provide care accommodation in care suites or apartments.

Standard rooms

These are usually single rooms and often have space for small items of personal furniture, such as an armchair.

Premium rooms

These are usually double rooms (or larger) with premium features such as an ensuite, private bathroom, or garden views.

Care Suites

These are much larger rooms that normally include a kitchenette, lounge area and ensuite. Care suites are commonly sold under an Occupation Right Agreement (ORA) which means you pay a capital sum to secure the room. Some care suites accommodate couples.

Serviced apartments

Residents who live in a serviced apartment may not be required to move if they require a higher level of care. This will depend on whether the retirement village can cater for higher levels of care within their existing apartment. It's important to understand exactly what this arrangement would look like. For example, a village may offer rest home level care in a serviced apartment, but require you to move into a room within a care home if you require hospital or dementia level care.

Other considerations

Respite care

An advantage of moving into a retirement village with an on-site care home is you will likely be able to receive respite care if recuperating from an illness or operation. Respite care can help to speed up recovery as you'll receive plenty of rest and be cared for by healthcare professionals.

A note on dementia care

It's important to note there are different types of dementia level care that an on-site care home can cater for. For example, an on-site care home may be able to care for someone with early onset dementia, but someone with higher level dementia may require specialist, secure accommodation. When visiting a retirement village that does offer dementia level care, ensure you ask specifically about the level of dementia that they can accommodate.

Couples

If you're in a partnership, it's likely that you and your partner will have different care needs as time goes on. Retirement villages are a great option for couples with different needs as they often allow couples to stay together even when one person's care needs progress faster than the other. For example, the person who is able to live independently could remain in a villa, while the other might move into a serviced apartment or room within the care home.
